

Elections

The Colorado Constitution provides that “All political power is vested in and derived from the people; all government, of right, originates from the people, is founded upon their will only, and is instituted solely for the good of the whole.” Elections play a critical role in Colorado, not just for selecting our political leaders at all level of government, but also in updating our constitution, establishing or amending our laws, and financing our programs and infrastructure. Our attorneys have extensive experience with Colorado election law, including but not limited to:

- Formulation of ballot questions
- Statutory procedures for initiatives, referenda, and recalls
- Fair Campaign Practices Act
- Taxpayer’s Bill of Rights (“TABOR”) elections
- Election schedules and logistics
- Ballot titles and single subject rule
- Litigation of election law issues
